

🕒 This article is more than 5 years old

As Israelis, we call on the world to intervene on behalf of Palestinians

Ilana Hammerman and David Harel

We're patriotic citizens but are horrified by the escalating tensions in our country: we fear for those who live here

The state of Israel is facing a catastrophic situation, which could, alarmingly soon, lead to extensive bloodshed. It is time for the international community to act decisively. Substantive external pressure - political, economic and cultural - offers the only chance of emerging from this impossible situation before it is too late. Not a sweeping BDS-style boycott of the country, but diverse, carefully crafted, acts of pressure.

We represent a group of intellectuals and cultural figures central to Israeli society, several of whom are world renowned in their fields. We are patriotic Israeli citizens who love our country and who contribute tirelessly to Israeli science and culture, and to that of the world at large. We fully intend to stay here and continue to contribute, but we are horrified by the situation and fear deeply for our lives and those of our offspring, and for the lives of the 13 million Jews and Arabs who live here and who have no other homeland.

Israeli court approves razing West Bank Bedouin village

→ Read more

The decision to direct our plea to the outside world is not taken lightly, and we do so with a heavy heart. The pressure we believe is needed must come from governments and parliaments, of course, but also from civil society, individuals and establishments. Ever since 1967, not a single Israeli government has put a stop to the expansion of settlements in the occupied West Bank. Moreover, in recent years, the official and openly stated ideological policy of the elected Israeli government has it that this land, from the Mediterranean to the Jordan river, belongs in its entirety to the Jewish people, wherever they may be.

🎞 'Enough is enough': UN condemns Israel as Palestinians bury their dead - video report

In the spirit of this ideology, the processes involving oppression, expulsion and ethnic cleansing of the Palestinians living in the West Bank are broadening and deepening. This includes Jerusalem, too, which was annexed by Israel in 1967, and the borderlines of which extend almost from Bethlehem in the south to Ramallah in the north. Israeli courts are in the process of legitimising the destruction of entire villages, and the Knesset is passing new laws that steadily decrease the ability of the courts to have a say at all. Others legitimise the additional expropriation of private Palestinian land in favour of the settlements built on them. These acts of one-sided expropriation violate those parts of international law that protect civilians of occupied territories, and some are even in violation of Israeli law.

For years the international community has been talking about a solution based on separate Israeli and Palestinian states coexisting in peace and security. But current Israeli policy renders this impossible. During the 51 years of military rule on the West Bank, Israel has taken over large quantities of land, and has placed around 600,000 Israeli citizens there in hundreds of settlements. It supplies them with roads, water and electricity, has built and financed their health, education and cultural institutions, and has given them the same civil and political rights enjoyed by citizens residing within its sovereign territory.

Palestinians killed as US opens embassy in Jerusalem - video report

In contrast, Israel is squeezing the living space of Palestinian residents, who enjoy no civil or political rights. With the aid of laws, special regulations and military orders it shuts them out of the areas it has allotted to its citizens and for its military training activities. It delineates and then expropriates their private and public land on the basis of rules it sets down for the sole benefit of its own citizens. It confines their villages by surrounding them with fences and barriers, destroys houses and refuses to allow them to expand; it imposes collective punishments, detains thousands of men, women and minors, tries them in a military court system and imprisons them in its sovereign territory.

Since all these actions are being carried out in violation of international law, the resulting situation is no longer just an internal Israeli issue. The institutions of the international community have taken many decisions intended to curb these actions, but none has ever been accompanied by enforcement mechanisms.

And so a destructive, violent and explosive reality is becoming the norm in these areas. We, who are located in the midst of this reality, believe the international community must help, since that community alone is responsible for enforcing compliance with its treaties and with the decisions of its institutions, and since in the current circumstances only it can do so.

Never have these issues been as clear cut and as urgent as they are today: if peace is not established in this part of the world very soon, an area that has become a timebomb of national and religious tensions, there will be no future and no life for us or the Palestinians.

● Ilana Hammerman is an Israeli writer and translator. David Harel is vice-president of the Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities

I hope you appreciated this article. Before you move on, I wanted to ask if you would consider supporting the Guardian's journalism as we enter one of the most consequential news cycles of our lifetimes in 2024.

From Elon Musk to the Murdochs, a small number of billionaire owners have a powerful hold on so much of the information that reaches the public about what's happening in the world. The Guardian is different. We have no billionaire owner or shareholders to consider. Our journalism is produced to serve the public interest - not profit motives.

And we avoid the trap that befalls much US media: the tendency, born of a desire to please all sides, to engage in false equivalence in the name of neutrality. We always strive to be fair. But sometimes that means calling out the lies of powerful people and institutions - and making clear how misinformation and demagoguery can damage democracy.

From threats to election integrity, to the spiraling climate crisis, to complex foreign conflicts, our journalists contextualize, investigate and illuminate the critical stories of our time. As a global news organization with a robust US reporting staff, we're able to provide a fresh, outsider perspective - one so often missing in the American media bubble.

Around the world, readers can access the Guardian's paywall-free journalism because of our unique reader-supported model. That's because of people like you. Our readers keep us independent, beholden to no outside influence and accessible to everyone - whether they can afford to pay for news, or not. If you can, please consider supporting us just once from $1, or better yet, support us every month with a little more. Thank you.

Betsy Reed
Editor, Guardian US

One-time

Monthly

Annual

$5 per month

$13 per month

Other

Continue →

Remind me in February

VISA

mastercard

AMERICAN EXPRESS

PayPal

Explore more on these topics

Israel

Opinion

Palestinian territories

Middle East and north Africa

comment

Reuse this content

Opinion

“ The pressure is building on Netanyahu over hostages - his only option is an ‘all for all’ deal

“ ‘Gender ideology’ is all around us - but it’s not what the Tories say it is

“ It’s the latest episode of The Tories - and it makes Squid Game look like the Brownies

More from Opinion

“ As the election looms, we must be alert to Trump’s threats of vigilante justice

“ The pressure is building on Netanyahu over hostages - his only option is an ‘all for all’ deal

“ Prince William should finish what Charles started - and sever the ridiculous ties of church and state

Most viewed

Across The Guardian	In Opinion
1	Oregon teen saves baby after seeing three die slipping on ice into power line
2	 Digested week: regular-sounding folk suspend disbelief over Trump
3	Fears grow for largest remaining hospital in Gaza as Israeli forces bombard Khan Younis
4	What happens when a school bans smartphones? A complete transformation
5	Chaos engulfs Michigan Republicans after election-denying chair's removal
6	Half of recent US inflation due to high corporate profits, report finds
7	Outrage as Oklahoma Republican's bill labels Hispanic people 'terrorists'
8	Trump lawyer: Ex-president not responsible for E Jean Carroll backlash because supporters were likely to believe him - as it happened
9	North Korean teens get 12 years' hard labour for watching South Korean videos
10	Judge hints that Trump's election interference trial might be delayed